The team is also responsible for the collection and publication of internal dispute resolution data from financial firms.

The role

This role will be directly involved in the internal dispute resolution publication project, where you will be required to assist the development of policy and technical requirements for the external publication of internal dispute resolution data. You may also be required to undertake core RI&A tasks such as assessing reports, mentoring team members and process improvement.

As an Analyst, you will be accountable for:

- Contributing to the development of public reporting of financial industry data reported to ASIC, including selecting appropriate data elements, presentation, and contextualisation.
- Working in a project team as a business expert on the development of the design and technical solution for the public reporting of financial industry data, provide subject matter expertise, manage risks, and report to RI&A's management group on the project.

- Working with data analysts to prepare summaries, reports, briefings, presentations, and data visualisations monitoring the status and quality of financial industry data reported to ASIC as well as to assist other teams make use of the data.
- Contributing to regular updates of ASIC's regulatory guidance and legislative instruments covering financial industry data reporting by monitoring law reform, industry product or issue changes, and desirable enhancements to the reporting rules or guidance.

The key duties of the position include:

About you

- Relevant tertiary qualifications.
- Relevant industry related experience gained in financial services, regulatory, corporate, insolvency, government policy, or commercial law environment.
- Demonstrated ability to manage multiple stakeholders and projects and take responsibility for outcomes.
- Ability to analyse and provide advice on practices, policy and projects relating to the financial services industry and ASIC's regulatory environment.
- Experience delivering results in a complex environment through a commitment to quality outcomes, managing risks, and the efficient use of resources.
- Strategic thinking, analytical, investigative and research skills, including data analysis and presentation.
- Conceptual, analytical, and problem-solving skills as well as drawing inferences from qualitative and quantitative data and to reach robust and practical conclusions.
- Confidence engaging with others, participating in difficult and challenging discussions, and asking probing questions.
- Ability to understand priorities and adjust work schedule to meet deadlines and ensure the delivery of effective and timely outcomes.
- Experience in effectively presenting complex information to different target audiences through strong business writing skills and verbal communication skills.
